PROFESSIONAL PROFILE

I am an Associate Professor at Stellenbosch University, South Africa. I teach Social Psychology at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels. I have also taught multivariate data analyses at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels. I am the undergraduate program coordinator for the Department of Psychology, with considerable expertise in course development and coordination. I have received multiple teaching awards in recognition of teaching excellence. I have successfully supervised 18 postgraduate theses and/or dissertations and 30 Honours research assignments.

RESEARCH PROFILE

My research interests include diversity, intergroup contact (cross-group friendships), intergroup emotions, prejudice, and stereotypes in post-conflict societies. I specialize in advanced quantitative research methodology (longitudinal survey research and experimental methods) and advanced statistical analyses (longitudinal, multi-level, and multi-group structural equation modelling). I have co-authored 16 peer-reviewed articles, 7 book chapters, and 24 conference presentations. I have published in the American Psychologist, Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin, the British Journal of Social Psychology, Group Processes and Intergroup Relations, and the Journal of Social Issues. In 2015, I was a co-recipient of the Gordon Allport Intergroup Relations Prize for "the best paper or article of the year on intergroup relations" from the Society for Psychological Study of Social Issues (USA).
